

Privacy Policy

NoteSail will have access to your personal data on consent. We do not ask for personal information except for users' first names and emails. This data can only be used on consent of the marketing team and the user.

Tasks that will be necessary in order to access your personal data include, but not limited to, recovering your password, which necessitates a personal security question, your email, and your name, marketing, improvement, and personalization.

Under contract under federal agencies, agencies have access to your data. State agencies must have your consent in order to access personal data. Your password is kept away in our database. Your name will be used in personalization.

We respect your privacy, which is why we have decided against letting your documents be visible to administrators. Under the share function, people who you allow to see the document will be able to see the document.

Under premium developer plans, your credit information will not be shared. This is why we call you directly instead of allowing you to purchase on our website, for security reasons. Under consent, credit information can be safely stored on physical documentation rather than online. On default, your credit information will be deleted from our databases or destroyed.

We will not send you website notifications.

We will not subscribe you to a newsletter of any sort without your consent.

We will not put you on a mailing list without your consent.

We will not call you without request from yourself.
